Barcelona, May 17. N. S.

THE Enemy continue their March towards Rouſſillon, burning and deſtroying all in their Way, and committing great Barbarities: They were yeſterday at Oſtalrick, within 5 Leagues of Girona, where we have a ſtrong Gariſon, a good Reinforcement having been lately ſent thither. The Enemy out of all their Artillery carried away with them but 12 Field pieces, and 3 of thoſe were taken from them by the Miquelets. We continue to make the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for improving the great Succeſſes wherewith it has pleaſed Almighty God to proſper our Arms.

Lisbon, May 29. N. S. This Morning came by an Expreſs from Gibraltar the welcome News of the Siege of Barcelona being raiſed. Sir John Leake having received Advice at Gibraltar of the Duke of Anjou's being before that City with his Army, and the Count de Toulouſe with a Squadron of French Men of War, he did, with the ſame extraordinary Care and Diligence with which he had fitted out the Ships that ſailed with him from hence about three Months ago, (after they had been much ſhattered in a long and tedious Paſſage from Barcelona hither) apply himſelf to carry the neceſſary Succours to that Town. He ſailed from Gibraltar the 24th paſt, and ſent away 4 Frigats with Orders to make for Altea or Denia, to get Intelligence of what Strength the Enemy's Squadron was. The 29th he got to Altea, and having Notice that a Squadron was ſailed from Lisbon to join him, it was reſolved in a Council of War to ſend to Veneros, to get further Intelligence of the Enemy, and to ſtay at Altea 24 Hours for the Squadron which was coming to join him; but if it did not arrive within the time, to proceed to Barcelona. A Frigat was ſent at the ſame time to the Weſtward, to get Intelligence of that Squadron, which met with 3 Men of War ſent before by Sir George Bing, with Notice, that he was making what Sail he could after the Fleet; and accordingly he came up with Sir John Leake the 30th about 10 in the Morning. The whole Fleet being now together, Sir John Leake endeavoured to proceed towards Barcelona, but was kept back 6 Days by contrary Winds and Calms. The 7th Inſtant the Earl of Peterborow came aboard, and took upon him the Command of the Fleet, as Admiral. Letters came that Day from the King of Spain, dated the 4th, with very preſſing Inſtances for Relief. Within two Hours after the Receipt of his Majeſty's Letter aroſe a very fair and freſh Gale, and brought the Fleet, with all the Forces and Recruits from England and Ireland, to an Anchor before Barcelona the 8th Inſtant in the Afternoon. The Count de Toulouſe was retired the Night before with the French Fleet. The King of Spain ſent an Aid de Camp to deſire the Admirals to ſend him a Reinforcement, expecting the Enemy would have made an Aſſault; and accordingly the Land Forces and Marines were put on Shore, and the Garriſon was thereby augmented to 8000 Foot. The Admirals went on Shore the ſame Evening, and attended the King of Spain, who received them moſt graciouſly; and expreſſed his great Satisfaction with the Arrival of ſo ſeaſonable a Relief, and his Gratitude for the Generoſity and tender Care wherewith Her Majeſty had ſo effectually ſupported and aſſiſted him. The 11th in the Night the Enemy's Forces drew off, leaving behind them their Artillery, Proviſions, Ammunition, and other Stores. The Enemy being obliged to march by a Paſs within half a League of Barcelona, the Miquelets attacked them there, and in an Hour's time cut off 500 of them. Six hundred Swiſs deſerted, as in all probability many more would have done, had it not been for fear of falling into the Hands of the Miquelets, who being enraged by the cruel Treatment they had met with from the French, gave no Quarter to any of them, altho' his Catholick Majeſty, out of his great Goodneſs and Clemency, even towards his Enemies, had, to preſerve their Lives, offered to the Miquelets two Piſtoles for every Deſerter they ſhould bring in. We are in hourly Expectation of the News of the Surrender of Ciudad-Rodrigo: After which it is hoped our Army will march towards Madrid. The Portugueſe Fleet from Rio Janonio came yeſterday into our River, very richly laden. The Monk and Expedition Men of War, in their Paſſage up the Streights, put aſhore near Cape de Gat a French Scout of 40 Guns, which the Enemy burnt, to prevent her falling into our Hands.

Hague, June 12. N. S. Our Army is ſtill at Arſeele, and will continue there till the Arrival of the Artillery and other Neceſſaries for the Sieges of Oſtend and Nieuport. The French have put the remains of their Foot into their Frontier Towns, and expect a Reinforcement of Troops from Germany, whoſe places are to be ſupplied by a Detachment from the French Army in Italy, which is commanded by the Duke de la Feuillade. They write from Bruſſels, That the Duke of Anjou had paſſed by Narbonne, in his Way from Perpignan to Pampeluna, with a very ſmall Retinue.

Dublin, May 27. Yeſterday, upon the News of his Grace the Duke of Marlborough's glorious Succeſſes, the great Guns at the Caſtle were fired, the Bells were rung, and the Day concluded with Bonfires, Illuminations, &c. And it is impoſſible to expreſs the univerſal Joy which this happy News has cauſed in this Kingdom.

Plimouth, May 31. The Dutch Fleet under Admiral Allemonde paſſed by here yeſterday to the Weſtward.
